- ❖ 3 in 4 respondents indicated no or low trust in public bodies protecting their rights
- ❖ 42% of respondents reported experiencing difficulties in accessing their rights
- ❖ 7 in 10 respondents reported an awareness of their citizens' rights

We identified additional key findings about citizens' rights

- ❖ The top three areas where citizens experienced difficulties accessing their rights were: (1) Employment, (2) Travel and (3) Healthcare.
- ❖ Respondents believed the IMA's priorities should remain protecting citizens' rights.
- ❖ The top three areas for family and community members were: Entry into the UK, digital status and healthcare.

Respondents shared their concerns about the future protection of rights

I don't trust the rules

Politics in UK is very divisive. No chance

protected

Our Assessment

Feedback from respondents was mixed. Whilst a majority reported experiencing no difficulties in accessing their rights and not having been discriminated against by a public body on nationality grounds, 86% indicated no or low trust in public bodies to protect their rights in the future. In summary, present experience is being overridden by fears about the protection of rights in the future.

Introduction & Background

About the survey

In order to effectively monitor the implementation and application of the Citizens' Rights Agreements, a core role of the IMA is to gather and assess relevant intelligence. Surveys are part of a range of methods used by the IMA and are particularly valuable to hear directly from European citizens and their family members about their lived experiences. This is the third survey since the IMA launched. The survey sought the views of European nationals and their family members currently living in the UK and Gibraltar. It is important to note that whilst based on our resulting sample size, our results are not statistically representative. The responses provide a key insight into the experiences of European nationals and their family members living in the UK.

The survey sought to establish the level of citizens' awareness of the IMA after two years of operation. The online anonymised survey ran for 8 weeks from mid-April to mid-June 2023. The IMA worked with advocate organisations including the3million, the Delegation of the European Union to the United Kingdom and many others to promote the survey and ensure it reached as many European nationals as possible. Nearly 1,000 citizens completed the survey, providing a rich source of information for the IMA to analyse. Topics covered by the 2023 survey included whether citizens felt they had been discriminated against on the grounds of their nationality, whether they could trust public bodies to protect their rights in the future as well as the extent citizens faced difficulties accessing their rights.

About this report

This report contains key findings and assessments drawn from the third survey results by the IMA. Similar to previous years, the analysis helps guide the direction of work across the IMA by improving our understanding of citizens' specific concerns and how citizens view us as an organisation. The survey and this report represent the continuation of proactive direct engagement between the IMA and European citizens and their family members. Over the coming months and years, we will continue to gather further information and insights from European citizens and their family members, as well as specific groups and communities. Direct engagement is a fundamental aspect of the IMA's monitoring function.

We are aware this third survey is unlikely to have captured the perspectives and experiences of all European citizens and their family members, reflecting only those who chose to engage with online-only research, shared primarily via social media. The IMA will continue to carry out smaller information gathering exercises with specific cohorts over the coming year that aim to complement the findings of this report and other work streams currently being undertaken by the IMA.

About the IMA

We protect the rights of EU and EEA EFTA citizens (Iceland, Liechtenstein and Norway) in the UK and Gibraltar. We do this by monitoring UK public bodies to make sure they implement the rights of these citizens and by identifying any underlying issues. We can receive complaints and have powers to launch inquiries and take legal action. We are independent of government and are both professional and impartial in our work.

Citizens' Trust

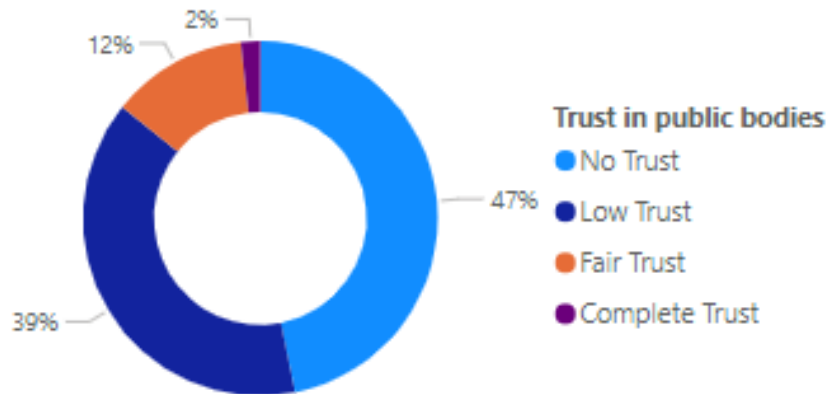

Level of Trust

Overview

The IMA asked respondents about their level of trust in public bodies. 86% of respondents reported having no or low trust that public bodies would protect their citizens' rights.

86% reported no or low trust in public bodies

Respondents' level of trust in public bodies protecting their citizens' rights

The majority of respondents reported having no or low trust that public bodies would protect their citizens' rights under the Withdrawal and Separation Agreements. 12% stated that they have fair trust and only 2% reported having complete trust.

14% reported having fair or complete trust in public bodies

The IMA asked respondents for the reasons why they had no or low trust in public bodies. Following analysis of these responses, 6 key themes emerged:

- ❖ Political environment
- ❖ Alleged Discrimination
- ❖ Digital Status
- ❖ Friends and family experiencing problems
- ❖ Lack of awareness of rights
- ❖ Application process is overly bureaucratic

Responses were overwhelmingly about the UK political environment, which was followed by Windrush. Relating to these two themes were futureproofing of conferred rights:

One respondent exemplified this by stating that "the government has already changed the rules retroactively without going through Parliament, which has led to the Windrush scandal situation, which remains unresolved. I don't trust it not to do it again."

Digital status was also commonly reported as a factor in low trust that rights can be enjoyed. A lack of personal control over the system and experience of some authorities not having knowledge of share codes contributes to that lack of trust.

Citizens voiced concerns regarding the future of their rights

Citizens' experiences of discrimination based on nationality

Experiences of discrimination based on nationality

Overview

1 in 4 respondents reported facing discrimination based on their nationality

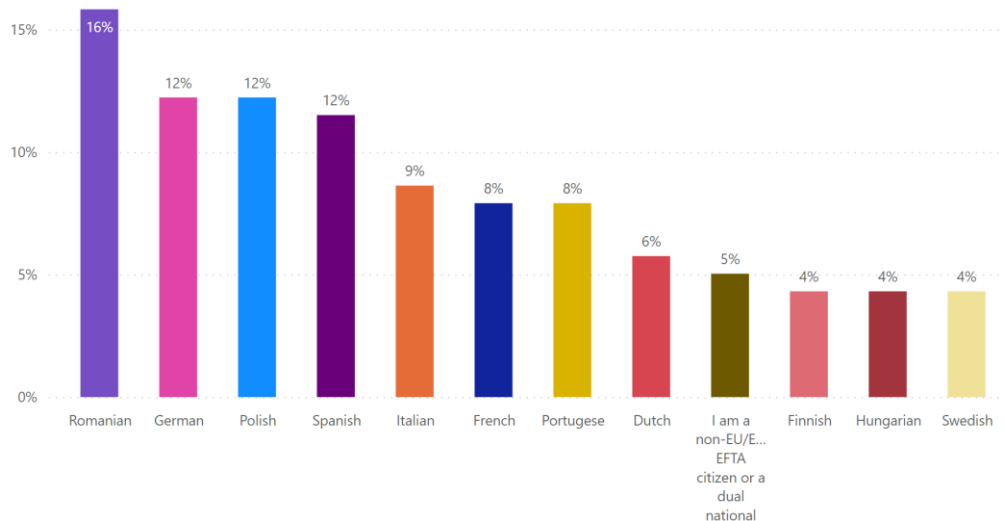

The survey asked respondents if they felt they had been discriminated against on grounds of their nationality. The majority (62%) felt they had not been discriminated against, whilst 25% of respondents did feel a public body had discriminated against them on the grounds of their nationality and 12% of respondents preferred not to say.

“Have you ever felt that a public body has discriminated against you on the grounds of your nationality?”

The IMA also analysed whether there were any differences in respondents' experiences between nationalities.

Nationalities with the highest proportion of respondents who feel they have been discriminated against on the grounds of their nationality

63% of respondents who feel discriminated against are EU14 nationals

Romanian respondents were most likely to report facing discrimination based on nationality

- Romanian respondents were the most likely to report feeling that they had been discriminated against by a public body on the grounds of their nationality.
- Only 5% of non-EU/EEA EFTA or dual nationality survey respondents reported feeling they had been discriminated against on the grounds of their nationality. It is worth noting, however, that the sample size for this cohort was small.

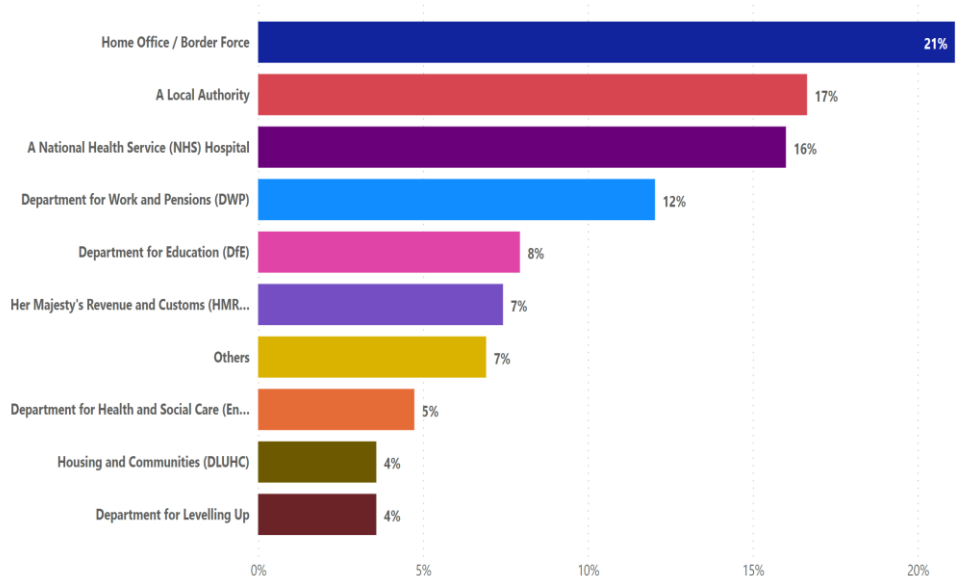

Experiences of discrimination based on nationality

Overview

54% felt they had been discriminated against by the Home Office, NHS or a Local Authority.

Of the public bodies respondents felt had discriminated against them, the Home Office, NHS or a Local Authority were the top three.

- Over 1 in 5 respondents reported feeling that the Home Office had discriminated against them on nationality grounds.
- 'Other' consisted of public bodies such as the Police, DEFRA, and the Foreign & Commonwealth Office.
- A small number of respondents also cited public bodies such as the DVLA, DBS and other sub-national governmental bodies.

Below are some comments from respondents in relation to some of these authorities:

Home Office/Border Force

- "Border Guards attitude towards EU citizens with right to enter seems really hostile. Furthermore, UKVI system is not transparent"
- "Windrush scandal, public discourse about immigration and EU, no physical proof of status, losing status if away from the UK for a while."
- "My EUSS has been issued in the wrong name..."

Local Authority

- "My Local Authority falsely requested a 'Home Office letter' to prove my SS...the govt website proved their request was unlawful. This was a direct threat to my social housing. I have been subjected to so much prejudice by my LA that has only increased..."

NHS

- "Polish UK residents being kept on an NHS healthcare waiting list for longer than white British patients."

The Home Office/Border Force was the most reported public body.

Accessing Citizens' Rights

Accessing Citizens' Rights

Overview

The IMA asked a question about any difficulties respondents faced when accessing their rights.

"Have you encountered any difficulties accessing your rights?"

58% of respondents indicated that they have had issues with accessing their rights "None of the time".

"Are you aware of any issues or concerns affecting other EU EEA EFTA, including family members?"

However, when we asked respondents who experienced no difficulties personally, 37% reported being aware of difficulties amongst family members and other members of their community.

Experiencing Difficulties and Citizens Level of Trust

80% of respondents who reported not having experienced difficulties themselves still reported having no or low trust in their rights being protected. This indicates the lack of trust regarding citizens' future perception of their rights, regardless of their own experiences of difficulties.

Less than 5% of respondents have had issues with accessing their rights "All of the time".

37% who experienced no difficulties themselves reported difficulties experienced by their community and family members

20% of respondents who experienced no difficulties had complete or fair trust in the future protection of their rights

Accessing citizens' rights

Overview

Nearly 1 in 2 experienced at least some difficulty in accessing their rights

38% of respondents reported experiencing difficulty with employment

1 in 3 respondents who experienced some difficulty reported issues with travel

Respondents who stated they had experienced at least some level of difficulty (48%) were provided with a multiple-choice question and selected all areas in which they had experienced a difficulty in accessing their rights.

38% of respondents who experienced some difficulty in accessing their rights reported that employment was one area of difficulty, followed by travel and accessing healthcare. It is worth highlighting that respondents wanted to report multiple difficulties across different areas.

Areas of difficulty in accessing rights

Having analysed responses from the qualitative choice 'other', the following key themes emerged:

Banking :- Responses mainly highlighted difficulties applying for a bank account;

Moving to Settled Status :- Respondents described facing technical issues upgrading.

Driving Licences / DVLA :- This largely focused on issues renewing licences or exchange EU driving licences.

Community and Family Members

Difficulties in accessing rights within communities

Overview

46% reported awareness of difficulties faced by community or family

Unlike the previous two surveys, the IMA asked respondents about difficulties faced by their wider community or family members in accessing their citizens' rights. While citizens might not experience an individual issue, may still hear about concerns or issues affecting their family or other members of the community.

46% of respondents reported being aware of their community or family members facing difficulties with accessing their rights.

“Are you aware of issues or concerns affecting family members and other members of the community?”

■ Yes ■ No

The IMA has analysed these areas of perceived difficulty and broken these down into key themes.

Awareness of community difficulties in accessing rights by theme

1 in 5 reported difficulties regarding entry into the UK faced by community or family

1 in 5 respondents reported being aware of difficulties regarding entry into the UK affecting their communities or family members.

Following this, digital status was the second most cited issue (12%), closely followed by healthcare (10%) and benefits (9%). Other includes issues mentioned such as adults in care, domestic violence, issues with the DVLA, social security coordination, and voting rights to name a few.

Perception of the IMA

Awareness of the IMA

Overview

Only 6% of respondents reported having complained to the IMA

73% of respondents reported they would complain to the IMA

Of those who would not complain, over 1 in 3 stated they had no reason to do so

“Have you complained to the IMA?”

94% of respondents indicated that they have not complained to the IMA.

“Would you complain to the Independent Monitoring Authority?”

A majority of respondents indicated that they would complain to the IMA. 27% said that they would not complain.

“Why would you not complain to the IMA?”

Why would you not complain to the IMA?

- “Your website says ‘we would not resolve the individual complaints reported to us’. What’s the point if you are not able to solve or give me any advice whatsoever?”
- “Not sure. I guess that as a single person vs state machinations, I’d feel it wouldn’t be worth my time and effort. Of course, I would complain if I felt that my rights had been severely impinged.”
- “Issues I’ve had (struggles to gain employment post-Brexit) are circumstantial and may also be tied in with Covid and the economy. However, my fortunes have suffered post-Brexit and I have an unsubstantiated feeling that some of that is down to non-British status.”
- “I have no issues with IMA and I would not want to be anywhere on records complaint to any official body as this could follow me with i.e getting a mortgage or such, or declare it on any forms, even if I was right the record will still remain and I could be discriminated as a dissident - history proved so”

Awareness and priorities of the IMA

Overview

More than 1 in 3 respondents were aware of the IMA

Social media was a critical tool for building engagement with the survey

35% of respondents stated that they had heard of the IMA prior to completing this years' survey. This indicates a 7% increase in awareness when compared to the 2022 annual survey.

"Have you previously heard of the IMA?"

"Have you completed previous IMA surveys?"

"Where did you hear about this survey?"

"What do you think should be the priority for the IMA?"

The IMA additionally asked respondents what they thought ought to be the IMA's main priorities going forward.

Monitoring mechanism for discrimination

Work rights

We need a proper ID, not sharecode

The IMA is not needed

Voting rights in general elections

Upholding rights of citizens in the UK

Online status is not enough

Scrapping of high fees for naturalisation

Where to find who to turn to if you have a problem

Access to benefits

Vulnerable groups

Whether people are aware of access to rights

Support for non-EU spouses

Upholding rights of citizens in the UK was the dominant theme from respondents

Upholding all citizens' rights, physical status and protecting the rights of vulnerable cohorts were amongst the most suggested priorities. In terms of upholding rights, it is important to note some respondents' concerns about upgrading PSS to SS, particularly ensuring eligible PSS holders to achieve settled status.

Methodology

Methodology & limitations

Approach

Once again, the IMA undertook a solely online research approach to this survey. As was the case with the first and second IMA surveys conducted in 2021 and 2022, a relatively concise question list was devised with opportunities for qualitative responses, but with a focus on questions which would complement quantitative data analysis. Unlike the previous surveys, we asked respondents to provide not only their personal experience, but also what they are hearing from family members, friends or other members of the community. The aim was to provide a sense of the sentiments amongst those citizens who did not engage with the survey. This is with the understanding that those citizens who might experience difficulties are less likely to be aware of or engage with an IMA online only survey.

Notwithstanding what is outlined above, this approach likely resulted in certain groups of citizens facing barriers to access this survey, especially where digital literacy or English literacy is limited. Undertaking the survey solely online and in English continues to curtail the ability of the IMA to reach groups and individuals who are less proficient. Moving forward, the IMA has started actions to engage citizens beyond an online only platform e.g., face-to-face meetings, focus groups and engaging with on-ground community-based organisations. Although this will not yield the same number of responses as the online survey, it will expand the IMA's understanding of what 'all' EU EEA EFTA citizens are experiencing in relation to accessing their rights, be it positive or negative. Any additional responses from these different sources will be reported as separate pieces of research.

Statistical significance

The census completed in 2021 indicates that 3.6 million EU citizens were living in the UK. As a more recent proxy, Home Office applications to the EU Settlement scheme as of 30th June 2023 stood at 7.4 million, with around 6.2 million individual applicants.

The IMA received nearly 1,000 responses to the 2023 Annual Survey. Despite this, our overall findings are not statistically significant. In addition to this, it is worth bearing in mind that the sample reported on is self-selecting as a result of the digital and English-only nature of the survey.
